TWO YOUNG HEROES SAVE COMRADE FROM DROWNING.

Plunge Off Dock, Drag Boy to Safety, Then Resuscitate

Brooklyn developed two young heroes to-day when six-year-old Joseph Barcooks of No. 127 Twenty-sixth street fell of the dock at the foot of Twentythird street. The lad was playing with some other children when he elipped on the edge into the water. Playing ball nearby was Harry Thelme, fifteen years old, of No. 752 Fifth avenue, and Authony Keyes, fourteen years old, of thony Keyes, fourteen years old, of Fourth avenue and Ninety-seventh street. They both ran down the dock and Thelme took a neader after the foundering lad.

Before Theime could reach Joseph, the latter had disappeared beneath the surface. Thelme became exhausted and bagan a struggle for his own life. Anthony Keyes plunged in at this point and managed to get a grip on little Joseph, who had bobbed to the surface. He struggled to the dock with his rest cue and was drawn above by masy hands. Harry Thelme manasted, unassisted, to get back to the dock.

The two boys then began to work on Joseph and in the midst of their operations an ambulance arrived. The doctor said that the artificial respiration practiced on Joseph by the two boys of the early statesmen of our country, which was an successful, and adopting again preferential duties in favor of American ships and against ships salling under foreign flags.

"The true friends of our merchant marine confidently assert that if this preferential policy of the fathers was restored it would revive our overseas carrying trade, and in a very few years build up our ship industries so that we would again secure our share of the ocean commerce of the world and save millions and millions of dollars that we pay annually to foreign shipowners.

"My friends, let me say that the policy i propose is not a makeshift. It is not new, having been the law of our country from 1782 to 1828, when it was suspended, and that suspension was one of the greatest political blunders in all our history. It is not a temporary expedient. It is permanent. It has been tried and not found wanting. It is the easiest way to restore the American merchant marine. Adopted again as our policy, it will never be repealed or sus-pended, but will speedly restore our ocean-carrying trade, revive our ship-building industries, give employment in imilding industries, give employment in-our shippards to thousands and thou-sands of men in all parts of the coun-try, bring about an era of prosperity such as we have never known before in our shipping frade and deep-sea com-merse, place our mag on every sea and in every port, and make our seamen what they were in the historic days of the Republic—the pride of America and the masters of the ocean highways of the world."
